The Joint Nature Conservation Committee is the body constituted by the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to be responsible for research and advice on nature conservation at both UK and international levels. It is a committee of the Countryside Council for Wales, English Nature and Scottish Natural Heritage, together with independent members and with representatives from the Countryside Commission and Northern Ireland. It is supported by specialist staff.

Prepared under contract from the Joint Nature Conservation Committee by the World Conservation Monitoring Centre. The World Conservation Monitoring Centre, based in Cambridge, UK, is a joint venture between three partners in the World Conservation Strategy and its successor Caring for the Earth: IUCN – The World Conservation Union, UNEP – United Nations Environment Programme, and WWF – World Wide Fund for Nature. The Centre provides information services on the conservation and sustainable use of species and ecosystems and supports others in the development of their own information systems.

Introduction

In April 1991, the Nature Conservancy Council for England (English Nature), Countryside Council for Wales and Scottish Natural Heritage, acting together through the Joint Nature Conservation Committee, were appointed by the Secretary of State for the Environment as the United Kingdom's Scientific Authority for Animals under the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES). CITES regulates international trade in wild animals and plants, and in products derived from them, to help to ensure their conservation on a world-wide scale.

The purpose of this work is to provide a list of the mammal species and subspecies included in the Appendices to (CITES), in the Annexes of the European Community (EC) Regulation 338/97, and to list their IUCN (World Conservation Union) conservation status category. This document incorporates additions and amendments to the CITES appendices up to and including those made at the 10th Meeting of the Conference of the Parties in Zimbabwe in June 1997 (effective from 18 September 1997). For each taxon, the scientific name is given first, with the currently most frequently used synonyms in brackets. Common names in the three working languages of CITES appear on the following lines, below which the geographical range is indicated.

The legislative and conservation status are provided in three columns: the CITES Appendix, the EC Regulation 338/97 Annex, and the 1996 IUCN Red List of Threatened Animals. For background material on the rationale of the IUCN threat categories, readers are referred to IUCN (1996); for background on the workings of CITES, recommended works are Favre (1989) and Wijnstekers (1992). For information by country on the diversity and status of mammals and other taxonomic groups, and for a general review of biodiversity, readers are referred to WCMC (1992) and WCMC (1994).

In a publication of this nature, it is inevitable that users will discover entries that need correcting or updating. The publishers would be grateful if their attention could be drawn to these entries and the World Conservation Monitoring Centre would be grateful to receive details of such changes so that they can be incorporated in the database from which this publication is derived.

Explanatory notes

Each species is typically represented by a block of text including scientific name (with alternatives), common names in the three official CITES languages (where available), geographic range, CITES Appendix, EC Regulation 338/97 Annex, and Red List category. Where a species has component populations or formal subspecies which are treated differently by CITES, the species entry is subdivided appropriately.

Scientific names

Nomenclature of mammals follows Wilson and Reeder (1993), except where the CITES Appendices differ (as noted below).

The taxonomic scope and sequence of orders in this checklist follow the system adopted in the Appendices to CITES. The Appendices are based on the classification of mammals proposed by Simpson (1945).

The sequence and taxonomic scope of orders and families also follows the Appendices to CITES. The Appendices differ from Simpson (1945) at ordinal and familial level as given below:

The order Marsupialia is split into three orders: Dasyuromorphia, Peramelomorphia and Diprotodontia.

The following families have been separated:

Dasyuromorphia
Thylacinidae from Dasyuridae
Diprotodontia
Burramyidae from Phalangeridae
Potoroidae from Macropodidae
Primates
Cheirogaleidae and Megaladapidae from Lemnidae
Galagonidae from Loridae
Hylobatidae from Pongidae
Cetacea
Neobalaenidae from Balaenidae
Carnivora
Herpestidae from Viverridae
Artiodactyla
from Cervidae

The following orders/families have been renamed:

Diprotodontia
Phascolomidae now Vombatidae
Cetacea
Rhachianectidae now Eschrichtidae

The following families/genera have been included within another family:

Primates

Callimico in Callitrichidae not Cebidae

Pongidae in Hominidae

Carnivora

Ailuropoda and Ailurus in Ursidae not Procyonidae

Xenarthra

Choleopidae in Megalonychidae now Bradypodidae

The nomenclature of genera and species follows Wilson and Reeder (1993), except in the following instances:

Equus africanus is included as E. asinus

Equus przewalskii is separated from E. caballus

Bubalus bubalis is included as B. arnee

Bos frontalis is included as B. gaurus

Bos grunniens is included as B. mutus

Bubalus bubalis is included as B. arnee

Ovis ophion is included as O. orientalis ophion rather than O. aries ophion.

These differences are included as synonyms in the list, and alternative names used in Honacki et al. (1982) and Corbet and Hill (1991) are also included as synonyms.

Common names

The English common names used are taken from Corbet and Hill (1991), from the IUCN Red Data Book series and from a number of standard reference works for the mammals of particular regions. Secondary English common names have been included wherever this was considered useful, including non-English names commonly used by English speakers. For the Cetacea, the common names used in Watson (1981), have also been included. Spanish and French names have been taken from the CITES Identification Manual Series and other sources.

Other information

The three columns headed 'CITES', 'EC Reg.' and 'RL' list the following information for each taxon.

CITES

I, II or III in this column refers to the appendix in which the taxon is listed under the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora. The two-letter abbreviations following Appendix III entries denote the countries whose governments have placed the taxon in this appendix, as follows:

BW	Botswana
CA	Canada
CR	Costa Rica
GH	Ghana
GT	Guatemala
HN	Honduras
IN	India
NP	Nepal
TN	Tunisia
UY	Uruguay

EC Reg.

The letters (A-D) in this column refer to the Annex of EC Regulation 338/97 in which the taxon is listed.

RL

Threat categories follow those given in the 1996 IUCN Red List and are as follows:

EX	Extinct
EW	Extinct in the Wild
CR	Critically Endangered
EN	Endangered
VU	Vulnerable
LR	Lower Risk
LR/cd	Lower Risk/Conservation dependent
LR/nt	Lower Risk/Near threatened
LR/lc	Lower Risk/Least concern
DD	Data Deficient
NE	Not Evaluated

Geographical Range

The geographical range of each taxon is given in terms of political units, listed in alphabetical order. In several cases, particularly where islands are covered, further distribution details are given thus 'Indonesia: Sumatra'.

When the name of a country is given as within the range of a certain taxon, that taxon may or may not occur throughout the country, and may even occur only peripherally.

Without surveying the range of each taxon in the field, it is necessary to rely on published records. Most taxonomic works give the range of a taxon in terms of broad geographical areas, rather than of political units. While some countries have a relatively well known and well-reported mammalian fauna, some others do not. These factors may occasionally have resulted in some of the geographical ranges given here being incomplete or inaccurate, although every effort has been made to prevent this.

For Cetacea, geographical ranges are first expressed in terms of oceans, seas, and rivers where the taxon is known to occur or to have occurred. Published sources may not distinguish live and dead cetacean records, but all records have been included. Most cetaceans are widespread but coasts of some countries within their overall range may be avoided for physical, chemical or ecological reasons. Only confirmed sightings are included and taxa may occur in political units other than those named within their overall range.

A question mark '?' in parentheses has been used following a country to indicate that there is some uncertainty in the status of the species in that country.

A country where the species is known to be extinct is denoted by '(ex)', or by '(ex?)' where there is still a small possibility that the species survives, or where recent searches have been unsuccessful.

'[int]' denotes a range state where the species has been introduced.

'[re-int]' denotes a range state where the species has been re-introduced
